Publisher's description: "The popular Adventures in Science books have proved their value as authoritative guides for classroom and outdoor science activities.

They are both teachers' references and pupils' texts, and cover a wide range of topics so that they may be used as a basis for a practical science course in schools in widely different environments.

Stress has been given to generally accepted major aims in the teaching of science. Both books are well illustrated. Type is large and clear.

Are you a busy teacher?
Do you need practical ideas for Art and Crafts activities?
Do you need a book that children can use also?
Do you need help in planning, guiding and evaluating Art and Crafts activities?

Then, THIS IS THE BOOK YOU NEED!

We are very proud to present a modern but practical guide to creative activities embodying the latest ideas in Art and Crafts education.

It is FULLY ILLUSTRATED. The teacher can SEE what to do and what to expect from the child. This book graphically presents a month by month program for the entire year. It outlines what children like to do at each creative level, materials to use, motivations, correlation possibilities, guidance and appraisal... This book utilizes the living life experiences of the child in every phase of the Art and Crafts program.

Publisher's description: "This text has been prepared to meet some of the problems surrounding the teaching, studying and learning of elementary (Grade IX) high-school mathematics in our smaller schools. In these school it is very often impossible for teachers to give sufficient time to class teaching of mathematics, with the result that many students need and are dependent on sources of information which are self-teaching and self-explanatory. The text meets this situation, and it has been tested successfully under such conditions. It is largely self-teaching and students find that they are encouraged to do their own thinking and therefore their own learning. . ." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids Catalogue, p. 54)

Publisher's description: "Each of the text-workbooks for these grades contains a combined programme for social studies, health safety, and citizenship. Each contains sixty lessons with a simple story to be read either by the pupils or by the teacher and pupils together. The story is followed by exercise material based on the story and accompanying illustration. A section entitled WORDS TO LEARN includes for special attention the few words which may be required for the reading of the story. The vocabulary is deliberately not restricted to the basic readers but is kept within the range of the pupils in these grades. It therefore supplies opportunities for extending and developing the vocabulary of children with those words which are essential for work in social studies, health, safety, and citizenship in these grades. All words used are within the experience of children at this age." (from the 1961-1962 School Aids catalogue, p. 1)

Publisher's description: "The new citizenship booklet introduced in schools in the fall of 1960 has been enthusiastically received by teachers and the public generally. It provides source materials for classroom use upon the development of democracy within the Commonwealth, upon the functions of the federal, provincial, and municipal governments in Canada, upon the meaning of Canadian citizenship, and includes details upon the Union Jack, flag etiquette, and the numerous emblems used in Canada and the various provinces. Furthermore, it contains sections upon the organization of the United Nations, the treaties which preceded its formation, and the text of the Declaration of Human Rights... "The need for an understanding of one's freedoms and responsibilities as a Canadian citizen has never been felt as urgently as it is today. This booklet supplies a fund of information and a message which leave no doubt as to our democratic heritage and our responsibilities as citizens in maintaining and extending the principles we have inherited. The booklet was first conceived as an outgrowth of a publication on citizenship in Manitoba, and in its development has received the co-operation of the Departments of Education in Alberta and British Columbia."

Instructions for all sorts of creative art and crafts projects school children can do, including examples of their creations.

Publisher's description: "Creative Art and Crafts listed by the Department of Education for use in the Schools of Manitoba and Saskatchewan.
Approved and listed by the Art Branch, Department of Education for use in the Schools of Ontario.
This book was written to assist teachers to develop a creative art program through the elementary school years.
It will prove especially helpful to the classroom teacher with a limited training in art. Beginning teachers will find it invaluable.
A special feature is the great number of reproductions of the work of children at various age levels.
New approaches and teaching techniques in a great variety of art activities are given.
A very complete and profusely illustrated section on picture-making for all grades will be found extremely helpful.
Materials to use, how to start, how to progress, and what to expect at different grade levels are given and clarified by means of children's work.
Another fully illustrated section shows results obtained by fascinating approaches to pattern making and color which have an appeal to children.
Numerous craft activities are included." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids catalogue, p. 39)

It deals with life in Arabia, the Sahara Desert, the Valley of the Amazon, the Valley of the Congo, Switzerland, Norway, The Netherlands, Eskimo Land, Lapland, Antarctica, India, China, Japan.

The book is written in language suited to Grades III and IV pupils. It is exceptionally rich in detail. In addition to the stories of life in different lands, it contains many fine illustrations, depicting the people, their homes, their occupations, and modes of travel. There are numerous suggestions for pupil activities which will assist greatly in the presentation of the different topics by the enterprise method.

"Far Away People" was prepared by a teacher thoroughly at home with her subject, and of recognized ability in classroom procedure.

We are confident that teachers in all provinces will find this book valuable indeed.” (From the 1943-1944 School Aids catalogue, p. 13)

Too many theorems tend to confuse and discourage the student...

The many diagrams and illustrative examples and hints are of particular value to students working alone and to teachers who find the subject difficult to teach...

on long and careful research. The stories reveal many events of the early days that have hitherto been only slightly touched upon by historians."

(From the 1961-1962 School Aids catalogue, p. 17)

"It is a pleasant thought that history can be presented in such an attractive form--a form that makes it alive, convincing, and entertaining. Here are grouped a series of personality studies of daring Indian chiefs and scouts, illuminated by careful research and genuine sympathy. The early settling of the West comes alive again in these stories about the Indian statesmen who tried to keep the peace with their neighbors, the white settlers. The writer's clarity and justice enlightens the development of these Indian personalities, which are supplemented with an account of the Western Indian treaties, prairie handicrafts, and legends. This is a well-rounded selection and development of prairie Indian life that will appeal to all.

Source notes: Authorization notes: Learning to speak and write our language. Book II not authorized.

Subject headings: English language -- Grammar -- Juvenile literature

Publisher's description: "In preparing this English book for Grade 2, two problems were kept in mind by the author. The first was to develop a book that would provide adequate material for teaching and learning. The second problem was to make the test appealing to children at this grade level. Both of these features have been combined in this book.

The topics of study have been developed for primary children with little or no special training in English. The lessons progress as follows—alphabet, words, sentences, sentences on one topic, stories, and very simple letters all at the Grade 2 level.

Adequate provision has been made for correct usage, poetry appreciation, and speech training. It is suggested that the lessons on poetry appreciation and speech training may be presented by the teacher to assure correct interpretation and beauty of speech.

It is expected that this book may serve as a supplement to the reading program since the vocabulary has been carefully checked for the grade level. All words that are not generally found at this grade level have been noted at the beginning of each lesson to help both teachers and pupils, and these words have been listed at the back of the book.

Both the situations and the treatment of them have been carefully chosen for the grade level in order that maximum interest may be developed in the pupils.

Provision has been made for special reviews with an over-all review at the conclusion." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids catalogue, p. 25)

Abstract: U of S Library catalogue notes: "This book has been organized to provide children of different levels of ability with work according to their respective talents"--Foreword.

Publisher's description: "This book offers under one cover numerous teachings and drill lessons in oral language and expression, speech training, and written language for the first three divisions or grades. It provides levels of work arranged in such a way that the book is of special value to teachers in rural schools where grades are often combined. However, teachers in schools where the grades are taught separately will also find it extremely useful.

Lessons are closely correlated with social studies and natural science."
Each lesson is followed by a number of activities which may serve as seatwork. The vocabulary is such that the book can successfully be placed in the hands of the children, and each lesson is illustrated to make the book more attractive and impressionable.

The Magic of Language has a twofold purpose—a guide to the teacher and a help to the pupil.

The author, Miss M. K. L. Harpley, is a teacher of high standing in Manitoba. She has been teaching the Experimental Class of the three primary grades in one group at the Normal School in Winnipeg, for the Winnipeg School Board, and is now principal of the Sir John Franklin School. (From the 1943-1944 School Aids catalogue, p. 4)

"The aim of this book is to provide exercises to cultivate the ability to speak and write in the primary grades. Many teaching and drill lessons are included with this in mind. It is equally of value in the rural school where grades are often combined and in the one-grade classroom where pupils show many differences in language abilities." Subject headings: School music -- Instruction and study -- Saskatchewan
Music -- Handbooks, manuals, etc

Publisher's description: "As you are aware, there are three significant trends in classroom music education:

1. A greater emphasis is being placed on the combined vocal-instrumental approach.
2. Added importance is being given the role of the classroom teacher in the music programme, aided of course through the counsel of the specialist and supervisor wherever possible.
3. There is an increasing tendency to adapt and apply proven methods from the field of language learning to the field of music learning.

This manual conforms to these trends. It outlines simple, proven methods to assist the average classroom teacher in her music problems. All phases of the music exploration programme, singing, bodily movement, classroom instrumental activity, creative record listening, keyboard exploration, conducting, voice production, and technicalities are covered in terms intelligible to the teacher who may have a limited musical background.

Examine this unique Manual and you will readily see that the multitudinous cross-references and the detailed index enable any teacher to locate quickly the answer to any music problem likely to arise in the elementary classroom.

We are sure you will agree that this Manual would be a valuable addition to the reference library in every classroom and school." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids catalogue. p. 34)

Adventure stories, Canadian

Abstract: U of S Library catalogue notes: A short novel about a boy's adventures riding with his father, a buffalo hunter and trader, through Indian territory in what is now southern Saskatchewan and Manitoba during the summer of 1840. Paul Savard could well be a fictionalized young Norbert Welsh, the author's neighbor whose story she recorded in The last buffalo hunter. Thirteen-year-old Paul has an unforgettable adventure with his horse Flash, being captured and escaping several times from Blackfoot Indians and from an unscrupulous trader, surviving alone for weeks by using his skills learned from Cree and Assiniboine Indian friends (Dying Loon, Chief Arrow-maker), and from his own father. Ages 11 and up.

First published: New York: T. Nelson, c1941

Includes song "The masterpiece," with music (p. 50)

Also published: New York: Nelson, 1941. Cf. Peel, B. Prairie provinces 6469

Publisher's description: "This is the story of Paul Savard, a boy who wanted to be a buffalo hunter. It is a fast-moving story from beginning to end. Paul is captured by an Indian and is held prisoner in the Blackfoot camp. He manages to make his escape on his fleet-footed mare, Flash, only to fall into the hands of Peter Jerome, a buffalo hunter, who recognizes the value of the mare. Paul gets away from Jerome's brigade but is prevented from reaching home when Flash breaks her leg. Paul hides the mare and himself until Flash can run again. Finally he meets with his father and his young friend, Dying Loon." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids catalogue, p. 17) places, some in the air, some in the water, some hot and some cold; places include Norway, Japan and Baffin Island.) Ages: 7 to 10.

Publisher's description: "A social studies reader for grades 3 and 4."

"Want to go adventuring? Then come along with us! "Perky Rides" is a reader for children in Grades 3 and 4.

Perky pilots a plane or rows a boat and will take you adventuring to Eskimo Land, Norway, Switzerland, China, Japan, and India. At home the clock turns backwards and you walk with Indians and pioneers on the great empty prairie.

At last you're home with Betty to be among the daisies and dream of all the lovely places and the people you have seen. This little book makes good reading for boys and girls of this age group as well as supplementing the work covered by "Friends Far and Near."  (From the 1961-1962 School Aids catalogue, p. 15)

Abstract: U of S Library catalogue notes: See also: Indians of Canada and prairie pioneers
"Things to do" at the end of each section
About Indians -- White men visit the Indians -- Real pioneers.

Publisher's description: "The story, "Indians of Canada", covers the chief tribes of the Dominion. It is taken from Dominion government records and from the writings of men who actually lived and worked among these interesting peoples. It tells of the home life and legends, of the work and play, and of the struggles of fourteen different tribes. It will interest both teacher and pupil. Illustrated with over sixty pictures and drawings.

Of special interest is the section on totem poles carved by the Indians of British Columbia.

Authentic Material--Mr. Scarrow came to the prairies in 1887, and saw much of the life described. From the wealth of material he has collected during his years of teaching and inspecting in Saskatchewan, Mr. Scarrow, with the help of Miss Gibson, has written this excellent books, "Prairie Pioneers and Indians of Canada." It is well illustrated with actual photographs, and contains stories about Indians, early white traders and explorers, and tales of the pioneers. Much of the material was compiled with the help of people who actually took part in or remembered the various historical events that are reported. It even contains an actual letter from an old Metis hunter.

Adapted to Grades III, IV, V, and VI--The material in this book is particularly useful for teaching Grades III, IV, V, and VI Social Studies as outlined in the Saskatchewan curriculum.

Many Suggested Activities--Over one hundred suggested "Things to Do" that children will actually enjoy doing, make this a valuable addition to any teacher's library." (From the 1943-1944 School Aids catalogue, p. 17)

"The story of the Currie family who came to Pile of Bones in 1882," focusing on the adventures of thirteen-year-old Mort. English literature supplementary reading for grades 5-6 (1960-61 "A" course), and for grade 7. Other notes: Peel 1080 Publisher's description: "This is a delightful story of a thirteen-year-old boy, and his horse, Prince, in the days when the foundations of Saskatchewan were being laid.

There is a wealth of historical detail, but so skillfully is it interwoven into the fabric of the story that it never impedes the easy, natural flow of the narrative.

The style is simple and there is plenty of action -- a run-away, a prairie fire, the first Regina fair, a blizzard an scouting adventure during the Saskatchewan Rebellion.

Young Mort is a real boy and the young reader, for whom this book is written, will feel an immediate kinship with him and his Indian chum, Little Bear.

Adult readers will appreciate this book for its warm, friendly atmosphere, its beautiful descriptions of the prairie, its intimate picture of farm life and its original approach to the problems of the pioneer." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids catalogue)

Music appreciation
Publisher's description: "When music is properly taught, no other subject gives greater returns in pleasure to both pupil and teacher. Miss Pears' intensive study of music and her wide experience as a teacher have enabled her to prepare, in "Public School Music Teaching", a book of real value to both experienced and inexperienced teachers.

The text is a teachers' manual and guide. Many practical suggestions are contained therein. The use of this book will do a great deal to make your efforts in the teaching of music more effective and enjoyable." (From the 1943-1944 School Aids catalogue, p. 25)

Publisher's description: "...The topics of study have been developed for primary children with little or no special training in English. The lessons progress as follows--alphabet, words, sentences, sentences on one topic, stories, and very simple letters all a the Grade 2 level." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids Catalogue, p. 25)

"In preparing this text in English, two problems were kept in mind by the author. The first was to develop a text that would provide adequate material for teaching and learning. The second problem was to make the text appealing to children at this grade level. Both of these features have been combined in this book." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids Catalogue, p. 26)

"This book for Grade 4 English is planned and organized into eight major areas plus a review unit. The eight units have been chosen as the major topics of study at this grade level and the various aspects of language have been integrated in each unit." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids Catalogue, p. 26)

"This book for Grade 5 English is planned and organized into eight major areas plus a review unit. The following eight units have been chosen as the major topics of study at this grade level and the various aspects of language have been integrated in each unit:

1. The Sentence.
2. The Letter.
3. Conversation.
4. The Paragraph.
5. Enjoying Poetry.
7. Making a Report on an Activity
8. Telling a Longer Story.

Care has been exercised to keep the material at the interest level for Grade 5 and to use an appropriate vocabulary. A deliberate attempt has been made to provide exercises and situations that are applicable to both rural and urban schools." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids Catalogue, p. 27)

"This book for Grade 6 English is planned and organized into eight major areas plus a review unit. The eight units have been chosen as the major topics of study at this grade level and the various aspects of language have been integrated in each unit.

Care has been exercised to keep the materials at the interest level for Grade 6 and to use an appropriate vocabulary. A deliberate attempt has been made to provide exercises and situation that are applicable to both rural and urban schools." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids Catalogue, p. 27)

"Many attempts have been made during the past twenty years to devise an English Text which would integrate the story of Language structure--grammar, and the study of Creative writing--composition. Most of these attempts have failed. The fact is that the study of language structure and the study of creative language arts, although related, are two separate studies. Their relationship and their integration must be established by the teacher both by incidental and more deliberate means. In Grade VII "Speaking and Writing Our Language" this has been done. The year's work has been divided into eight units corresponding to eight natural areas of language expression in the lives of the pupils...

A feature of this book which stands out in contrast with other contemporary English texts is the emphasis upon creative exercises as opposed to the mechanical blank-filling type. We believe that by doing this, the pupil will acquire a real skill in the use of the English language." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids Catalogue, p. 28)

Publisher's description: "The Stone Age on the Prairies" will fill a long-felt want. For years teachers and pupils have been inquiring for a book about the pre-history of Saskatchewan and the prairies generally, but up to the present no such book has been published.

The present book has been written by the well-known authority, W. J. Orchard, who for over forty years has been studying and collecting relics of the stone age in the west.

It contains seventy pages of beautiful photographic illustrations depicting over three hundred specimens, none of which has ever before appeared in any work on the subject. Though thoroughly authentic and scientific as a book of reference for teachers, it is quite readable by young people.

Teachers and collectors will find this book most useful and informative in studying prehistoric specimens of stone, implements, arrow heads, etc." (From the 1943-1944 School Aids catalogue, p. 17)

Hudson's Bay Company

Northwest Territories--History

Publisher's description: "Trader King is a book by Mary Weekes in which she tells the story of Cornwallis W. King as he told it to her. Trader King, who was a fur-trader for the Hudson's Bay Company between the years of 1862-1903, spent much of his time in the Mackenzie River Basin. His account of his activities and adventures while trading in this region are interesting and entertaining. Trader King tells about his fur-trading activities among the Yellow Knives and other Indian tribes. He tells about establishing trading-posts and how he overcame many of the difficulties met with in carrying on the fur-trade. He describes the formation of the river brigades and shows how important they were in the life of the North. In includes stories of meetings with the leaders of such expedition (sic) as those in charge of Macound, Selwyn, Sir Sandford Fleming and others. Through his eyes we see the North peopled with persons who have contributed to its development. Mrs. Weekes has ably reported this story as told by Trader King. Many illustrations add interest to the text." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids catalogue, p. 18)

Abstract: U of S Library catalogue notes: Arithmetic/Mathematics textbook authorized for use in Grade 9 in Saskatchewan, 1953-1955, 1960-1964 (Saskatchewan Department of Education Circulars). Includes some practical business, farm and construction arithmetic and ends with arithmetical amusement.

Publisher's description: "Authorized Text for All Grade IX High School Students in Saskatchewan Studying Grade IX Arithmetic"
"Arithmetic is one of man's greatest intellectual achievements and can neither be omitted nor slighted as a component of a well-balanced curriculum for junior high school students. It is believed that a full understanding of its practical value with a detailed knowledge of its principles is an important part of the mental equipment for those who must live in today's world.

The course has also been prepared for young adults who may wish to strengthen their arithmetical knowledge, for students who plan to enter composite high schools, for those who wish to study technical subjects, and for those who do not expect to study mathematics beyond the Grade Ten level.

A glance through the table of contents will show that the course is comprehensive and so arranged that each part grows out of another, and that full advantage is taken of the fact that arithmetic is a made-made, logical, exact system of related and expanding ideas. When the student understands this the learning of arithmetic becomes meaningful.

The course is largely self-teaching and of such a nature that the student must do his own thinking and, therefore, his own learning. Just enough detailed explanation is given to make clear the meaning of all the important principles to be studied. The background knowledge of the average student is made use of and the value of integrating related ideas is kept in mind." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids catalogue, p. 53)

Publisher's description: *This answer book has been prepared for teachers and private students and contains the answers to the calculation exercises found at the end of each chapter of the text.

The authors of the text "Using High School Arithmetic" hope that the provision of an answer book will not be injurious to the process of learning arithmetic. Given answers are merely to provide a ready check on the accuracy of the work of the student, and are not intended as crutches for the mentally lazy. They can, when properly used, provide a certain incentive to the conscientious student.

To the learner of arithmetic an understanding of and an ability to use the mathematical principles studied is more important than the answer itself. It is for this reason that students are asked to give close attention to the mathematical reasoning by means of which they arrive at a conclusion, rather than seek the answer as an end in itself. There may even be some errors in the answers given here, and if you find them it will be a tribute to your ability as a student of arithmetic. (From the 1961-1962 School Aids Catalogue, p. 53)

Publisher's description: "Teachers will welcome the announcement that the Vitalized English series now includes a text for Grade V. This is a completely new book, published for the first time in 1942...

Teachers in Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario will find that the book contains a great deal of material for all topics suggested for language in these provinces, and teachers in all provinces will find an abundance of information written so that the child can read it with ease, and more practice exercises and language activities than the average class will require in a year." (From the 1943-1944 School Aids catalogue, p. 6)

"The format of this book conforms to that of the other volumes in the series. The contents include essentials of language instruction such as word usage, sentence building and paragraph construction. In addition there are topics on letter writing, speech training, introducing people, making a diary, picture study, writing picture sentences and descriptive paragraphs, making announcements, using the telephone, and broadcasting on the school radio." Publisher's description: "The contents of this series are aptly described by the title, "Vitalized English", for English is indeed made vital to the pupils using these texts. These books contain a complete study of oral and written language presented from every angle and in such a way as to attract the interest and stimulate the efforts of the children.

"Vitalized English" has long been a leader both in the field of language and in the use of activity to promote learning. Each exercise is a suggested activity and all these activities are ones which pupils will enjoy while they learn their English. The essential fundamentals of grammar are concisely covered in the same manner as the rest of the English. "Vitalized English" has proved so popular that the author has added further activities which bring the series into line with new trends in curriculum construction."

Grades VII and VIII bound in full cloth, hard covers, or separate books, flexible limp cloth.

"Vitalized English, VII and VIII" is the authorized textbook for use in Saskatchewan and Manitoba schools, and has been placed on the recommended list in Ontario and British Columbia, and is steadily finding favor in other provinces." (From the 1943-1944 School Aids catalogue, p. 7)

Publisher's description: We are pleased to announce that the Vitalized English series now contains text books for all grades from Grade IV to Grade VIII inclusive. The Grade IV book, just off the press, has been written by G. N. Griffin, author of the volumes for Grades VI, VII, and VIII, and F. J. Gathercole, author of the Grade V book in the series.

Sufficient material is contained in the book to provide a language lesson every day during the school year. Thorough and interesting drill is provided in language usage through the use of many games. Ample opportunities are provided for a variety of experiences involving oral language. Speech training exercises are suggested. Story writing is limited to the single paragraph story, and a number of good model paragraphs suitable for younger children are included. Emphasis is placed on sentence building, vocabulary enrichment, and correct usage as the basis for the study of the paragraph.

All topics outlined in the language course for Grade IV in Manitoba and Saskatchewan have been dealt with in this book. Teachers in all provinces, however, will find it is filled from cover to cover with interesting and beneficial language experiences for children in Grade IV. (From the 1943-1944 School Aids catalogue, p. 5)

"Vitalized English for Grade 4 contains a language lesson for every day of the school year. Games, oral language, speech training, one-paragraph story writing are all stressed. Model paragraphs are included. Emphasis is on sentence building, vocabulary enrichment and correct usage." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids Catalogue, p. 31)

Publisher's description: "For the teacher looking for handiwork suited to the kindergarten age group, and the parent whose child likes to cut, color and paste, we offer "Work and Play the Paper Way". Small children love to create, but it is often difficult for them to make which are not beyond their capabilities and yet give pleasing results. The material in this book has been designed especially for the children in the first grades. Many simple, but interesting, projects are illustrated. Patterns and directions for making a great variety of articles for every season and special days are contained in this very useful book. All projects have been successfully carried out by the author and by children in the primary grades. Every busy kindergarten and first grade teacher will soon realize this book will be a must for her classroom." (From the 1961-1962 School Aids catalogue, p. 40)
